Catherine Ross NICKERSON [editor]*The Cambridge Companion to American Crime Fiction 190pp Tp $49.95

From the execution sermons of the Colonial era to television programs like The Wire and The Sopranos, crime writing has played an important role in American culture. Its ability to register fear, desire and anxiety has made it a popular genre with a wide audience. These new essays, written for students as well as readers of crime fiction, demonstrate the very best in contemporary scholarship and challenge long-established notions of the development of the detective novel. Each chapter covers a sub-genre, from true crime to hard-boiled novels, illustrating the ways in which 'popular' and 'high' literary genres influence and shape each other. (American)

Douglas PERRY*The Girls of Murder City:*Fame, Lust and the Beautiful Killers*Who Inspired Chicago 304pp Hb $35.00

Chicago, 1924. Maurine Watkins was a reporter for the Chicago Tribune who zeroed in on murderers such as the 'Stylish Belva' Gaertner and the 'Beautiful Beulah' Annan - both of whom had shot down their lovers. Watkins' accounts made these brazen women the talk of the town. The author vividly captures Jazz Age Chicago and the sensationalised circus atmosphere that gave rise to the concept of the celebrity criminal. Fuelled by rich period detail and enlivened by a vast array of characters, this social history presents the freewheeling spirit of the age and its sober repercussions. (American)

Tagged 'Dumb and Dumber' by the US media in a story that made headlines around the world, two Australian boys on a working holiday decided to rob a bank. Their plan was so hopelessly inept that, although they escaped with over $130,000, the trail of clues they left behind ensured they were identified almost immediately. Both Anthony Prince and his partner Luke Carroll faced life imprisonment for armed robbery. Their youth, previous good behaviour and obvious remorse persuaded the US court to give them a reduced sentence, but they still served almost five years in some of America's most violent penitentiaries. In 1991, 34-year-old Aileen Carol Wuornos – an abusive, alcoholic man-hater with a murderous temper – was arrested. Wuornos had begun sex work at 12 years of age in exchange for cigarettes and beer. At 15 she bore an illegitimate child; at 16 she took to the highways as a hitchhiking hooker. In 1986, she entered into a relationship with Tyria Moore, aged 24. Tired of turning cheap tricks, Wuornos began robbing her customers of everything they had – including their lives. Her trial prompted a media frenzy. Here is the definitive account of a killer who confounded profiling experts. (American)

John SILVESTER & Andrew RULEUnderbelly: The Golden Casket*336pp Pb $22.95

Carl Williams once liked to brag he won Australia's bloodiest underworld war because he survived when most of his rivals couldn't. Too late Williams realised he had become a victim of the gangland feud he embraced, and was slowly being crushed by his 35-year jail term. He dreamed of an early release... but not in a body bag. As a big fish, Williams was kept in the most secure section of Barwon Prison and only allowed to associate with two trusted mates. The authorities were confident he couldn't be reached. Yet he was bashed to death while reading the daily paper. In the underworld, its those closest to you who are often the deadliest... (Australian)
